Dear Ms. Stelcen:

Thank you for your email responding to EPA's Notice of Opportunity to Review Site Records Prior to Building Demolition ("Notice") to Honeywell, sent May 20, 2014 and resent with enclosure on May 22, 2014. By way of clarification, EPA's Notice arises out of Honeywell's affiliation with Bendix Corporation, which appears to have had some connection to the Safety Light Superfund Site. We will be following up with Honeywell about this in the near future. As stated in EPA's above-referenced Notice, EPA has not yet made a final determination as to Honeywell's potential liability concerning the Site.

My July 27, 2011 email exchange with your colleague, Peggy Otum, concerned EPA's notice of depositions being conducted regarding the Site, which apparently was sent to Honeywell based on EPA's mistaken belief that Honeywell was affiliated with another company (Jarrell Ash). However, that notice did not deal with liability, and I did not 'confirm' that Honeywell was not a PRP at the Site. Again, EPA has not yet made a final determination as to Honeywell's potential liability at the Site.

I hope this clarifies any confusion. If you have any questions, please let me know.

Dear Ms. Zia and Mr. Garcia,

I am writing on behalf of our client, Honeywell International Inc. ("Honeywell") regarding the Safety Light Site in Bloomsburg, PA (the "Site"). Honeywell received EPA's letters dated May 20, 2014 and May 22, 2014 regarding the opportunity to review Site records prior to building demolition. Our records indicate that, in July 2011, my colleague, Peggy Otum, confirmed with Ms. Zia that Honeywell is not a PRP at the Site. Evidently, EPA had incorrectly identified

UNRECORDED
Honeywell as a successor to an entity known as Jarrell Ash. I have attached the relevant email communication in case you do not have it readily available.

Under these circumstances, we would appreciate if EPA would remove Honeywell from correspondence and other distributions related to the Site, and confirm to me by email that the agency has done so.

Thanks very much for your assistance,
Kerri Stelcen
